Don't Put Off A Tough Job

"It's time to get up and get ready for church," the woman said to her husband. From the other side of the bed came a muffled: "I'm not going. No one around here likes me; the sermon won't be that good; and I'm just not in the mood to deal with it all today."

"Listen," the woman responded, "You are going. The people really do like you; the sermon won't be that bad; and besides, you're the minister."

There are times when we simply do not want to face our work and the difficult situations which come with them. We are tempted to procrastinate, avoid or simply forget about doing what we know must be done. But procrastination seldom helps.

If you are putting off a tough job, the best way to get it done is to begin. Nothing is ever finished before it is started. So, even if you do not feel like it, get up and "go to church."
