Live As Long As You Have Life

I know a woman who is a retired school administrator and remains very active in community work, church and playing tennis. Not long ago, she remarked: "Time is a funny thing. The days often seem quite long, the weeks even longer, but the years seem to go by so quickly."

We tend to misunderstand time. We should not attempt to measure it in minutes or days or weeks or even years. We live in deeds, not years; we come to life in thoughts, not moments; we are most alive in feelings, not hands of the clock. The person who thinks the biggest, perceives the deepest and makes the most of what he or she has is the person who really lives.

The greatest danger of time is not that it will pass too quickly. The greatest danger is that we will pass through time without letting times of intense thinking, deep feelings and great aspirations pass through us. Time will pass—do not doubt this, there is no stopping it. Just make sure that you live as long as you have life.

*Let us not grow weary
of doing good*
